Analysis of an Issue Template

Paragraph 1 - Introduction

Acknowledge the complexity of the issue:

- The issue/belief/opinion that _____ is a complex/controversial/interesting one.
- Upon first glance at _____, it would appear that the speaker is correct. However, _____.
- _____ is a complex issue.
- Many/Some people believe _____, but these people overlook _____.

Thesis statement:

- I agree/disagree with the statement that _____ because _____ (overview of paragraph 2&3).
- My opinion is that _____.
- I will show that _____.
- I shall present arguments to show that _____.
- However, I intend to agree that _____ is _____ because _____.
- In this essay I will argue that _____.

Analysis of Argument

Paragraph 1

I always start begin with a broad statement about the issue at hand. For instance in an argument essay about whether it was necessary to conserve energy, I would begin with:

Energy conservation has become a hot topic in the United States as of late. There are those who debate climate change and those who affirm it, those who assert that humans are depleting the world's natural resources, including fossil fuels, and those who believe that humans are barely making a dent in consuming the resources the earth has to offer.

This sets up a fluid introduction to my essay, and by starting with an introductory sentence, I felt I would set myself apart from the majority of other test takers who begin "I agree" or "I disagree" -- remember, you want to distinguish yourself from other essay writers (in a good way) right from the start.

I always continue by saying, "In the preceding statement, the author claims that (paraphrase of the author's argument)." This shows that I understand the author's argument. I continue with my disagreement (and, as has been often said, ALWAYS disagree with the author's reasoning, and I pretty much always used the same thesis statement, something like:

Though his claim may well have merit, the author presents a poorly reasoned argument, based on several questionable premises and assumptions, and based solely on the evidence the author offers, we cannot accept his argument as valid.

I can use that statement for pretty much any argument essay I encounter. The beginning shows that I see the issue as nuanced, rather than black and white, and I recognize that though the author may have arrived at the correct answer, his reasoning is flawed. I also use "we" but I try to avoid using "I". Take that as you will.

Paragraph 2

For me, paragraph two always attacks the premises of the author's argument. I usually jot down a couple of premises on my board -- these are things that show up in the author's argument, usually without any evidence provided. So 99% of the time, I attack the lack of evidence that the author bases his premises on. I usually begin with some version of:

The primary issue with the author's reasoning lies in his unsubstantiated premises.

I like "primary" and "secondary" as transitional tools because they are more complex than "first" and "second". Throughout the first paragraph, I show flaws in the author's premises by pointing out his lack of evidentiary support (they pretty much always lack evidentiary support) and where they are open to holes or alternate explanations. I usually have two or three, but one would be fine if it was strong. I generally end with something like:

Difficulty and other parameters of the questions you answered You will earn a higher score if you answer a higher number of questions, answer more of them correctly, and qualify for questions of a higher difficulty level. If they are not, this move will not necessarily help to increase the number of students because it would appear that some other factor is responsible for the declining number. The standard error of measurement is 30-40 points. Your Official Score Report will include several ways to interpret your exam results. Scores are reported in intervals of 1. I had unsuccessfully attended a similar coaching institute earlier, but couldn't adapt to their teaching method. Some questions may have multiple parts; you must answer all parts to a question correctly to receive credit for that question. Finally, as a natural progression, the range of subjects should be expanded and library facilities improved after conducting a thorough survey of students and the market to determine the specifics of what subjects and what facilities would be best added. Each of your five GMAT exam scores is reported on a fixed scale and appears on the Official GMAT Score Report that you and your designated score recipients (graduate business programs) receive. Therefore, in order to increase the number of students attending our university, and hence to regain our position as the most prestigious university in the greater Fern Valley metropolitan area, it is necessary to initiate a fund-raising campaign among the alumni that will enable us to expand the range of subjects we teach and to increase the size of our library facilities." Discuss how well reasoned you find this argument. Most Integrated Reasoning questions require more than one response. Section Scoring How the Section is Scored Analytical Writing Assessment 0.0-6.0 Essays are scored using professional essay raters and a machine algorithm. For example, you may need to consider what questionable assumptions underlie the thinking and what alternative explanations or counterexamples might weaken the conclusion. Further, to use those assumptions and provide a cosmetic solution invites further trouble. The raw calculation is then converted to a number in the Total Score range. Because the questions are designed to measure how well you integrate data to solve complex problems, you must answer all responses to a question correctly to receive credit, no partial credit is given. Two questions beg to be answered before this suggestion can be evaluated. Your Integrated Reasoning Score Integrated Reasoning (IR) scores range from 1 to 8 in single-digit intervals. The financial planning office of Fern Valley University suggests that a fundraising campaign be initiated in order to increase the range of subjects taught at the university and to expand library facilities. Quantitative and Verbal 6-51 The Quantitative and Verbal Reasoning sections are item-level adaptive, and your score is based on three factors: 1. Your Score Report cAAA The Details You may be tempted to pay attention only to your Total score, but the other scores are also meaningful. Whether your answers are correct 3. Verbal and Quantitative scores are on a fixed scale and be compared across all GMAT trial administrations, but since they measure different constructs, they cannot be compared with each other. In addition to addressing the assumptions made, the department must determine all possible factors that may have resulted in the declining number of students and admissions, factors such as more and better universities, negative feedback from students, an expanding job market, etc. Thus, the department should refrain from reactionary measures and take into account the aspects discussed above, after which the recommendation will be more well-founded and logical. This recommendation is in response to the fact that there has been a decline in applications and admissions to Fern Valley University in recent years. The second question that comes to mind is that even if the students are representative of all Fern Valley University students in general, how exactly is bad teaching connected to the range of disciplines? GMAT 690 Ishita Puri Manya ID: CHD192009E0026 It was last year, August, that a friend recommended Manya-The Princeton Review for my GMAT preparation. In your discussion, be sure to analyze the line of reasoning and the use of evidence in the argument. In addition, the department should also check whether the students who express dissatisfaction speak for the majority. These scores give you and the programs receiving your scores insight into your strengths and areas for development. The reason can be discovered by our students, who most often cite poor teaching and inadequate library resources as their main sources of dissatisfaction with Fern Valley. The department believes that the reason for this decline is that some students have been dissatisfied with the quality of teaching and library facilities at the school. If poor teaching is indeed the reason for dissatisfaction and ultimately for the decreasing number of students, then is to improve the quality of education, possibly by improving the curriculum, the way it is taught and teacher training. Fern Valley University's financial planning office recommends that the university collect funds from alumni to expand the range of subjects taught at the university and increase the size of the library facilities, all to increase the number of students attending the university and improve its reputation Integrated is based on the number of questions you answered correctly. The aim is mainly to halt the decline in student numbers and admissions by addressing these two issues. Why schools value your GMAT scores Listen as Julie Barefoot, Goizueta Business School, Emory University in Georgia shares why schools value your GMAT scores. Your Analytical Writing Assessment The Analytical Writing Assessment (AWA) score is based on an Analysis of an Argument essay. If there is a disparity between the algorithm score and the human score, the score will be reviewed by an additional human rater, and may be adjusted If you believe your AWA score is inaccurate, you can request that your trial be rescored using the trial's Rescore Request Form. Number of questions you answer 2. While both tasks are important and admirable goals in general, the department's reason for these goals is that students have expressed dissatisfaction with the teaching and library facilities. Scores are reported in intervals of 10. "In recent years, Fern Valley University has experienced a decline in both applications and admissions applications. Manya has a very unique, planned and systematic approach to the GMAT. Students citing dissatisfaction are of all students in general? Simply expanding the range of subjects taught will not affect the quality of education.
